

Press release

Section 1 Films, a collection of independent freelance film- and videomakers, has arrived in the Charleston area. Armed with an artistic eye and broad production experience, the group of Temple University Film and Media Arts graduates is targeting the Lowcountry for commercial and corporate videography.

“When we decided to leave the Northeast,” said member Joshua Clarke, “we searched for an area that is cultured and would be receptive to the level of quality and professionalism we’re used to working at. Charleston appeared to be the perfect location.”

Section 1 Films offers production services ranging from broadcast commercial advertising, corporate videos such as industrial training videos, video for real estate companies and for usage on the Internet, and radio spots, among others.

“Basically we offer our services for any project that requires a camera and an imaginative eye,” said Clarke.
